

KRISTIAN REICH

Kristian Reich is Professor of Dermatology at the Georg-August-University Göttingen and partner at the Dermatologikum Hamburg in Germany, which is an international center of excellence of dermatological patient care, employing more than 50 dermatologists, microbiologists, pathologists and molecular biologists. He also holds the position of Medical Director at SCIderm GmbH, also based in Hamburg, where he is actively involved in clinical trials, scientific research and pharmaco-economic projects in dermatology. In addition to his daily work as a consultant in dermatology, venereology and allergology, he serves as an academic lecturer in immunology, allergology and genetic epidemiology.

Professor Reich received his medical degree from the Technical University Munich, Germany, and other clinical and scientific education from London, UK; Harvard Medical School, MA, USA; and Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, CA, USA.

Professor Reich was the winner of the Herxheimer Prize of the German Society of Allergology and Clinical Immunology. He has more than 200 publications in international peer-reviewed journals. As a member of the Psoriasis Guideline Group of the German Society of Dermatology and the scientific advisory boards of the German Psoriasis Foundation and the German Psoriasis Registry, in addition to seeing patients with psoriasis every day, he is actively involved in many other issues around the disease.
